

Olympic movement and East Asian Relations

Xu Guoqi

This talk will focus on the following issues: how modern Olympic movement has affected national development of East Asian countries, how the Olympic Games have affected national images and identities of China, Japan and South Korea, respectively, and how sports as part of popular culture have intertwined with international politics within East Asia. The lecture will pay special attention to last year's Beijing Olympic Games and discuss its legacies, implications, and significances.